

Students flock back to scho...

COLLEGES: RETRAINING

Students flock back to school in the oil patch

A Canadian Natural Resources pump jack pumps oil out of the ground near Dorothy, Alta., in 2009. With the oil-and-gas industry slowing because of the slide in oil prices, many people in the oil patch are looking to retrain.

TODD KOROL/REUTERS

PAULA ARAB
SPECIAL TO THE GLOBE AND MAIL
NOVEMBER 11, 2015

Postsecondary education in Alberta is one sector that appears to be booming from the bust in energy prices.

Amid thousands of oil-patch layoffs and a wider economic slowdown, many

Students flock back to scho...